"Where Do You Glory? About What Do You Boast? By: Mike Moss This week I ran across an interesting story which will be the starting point for the sermon.

There once was a frog. The tale involves a frog who was prone to boasting. He and his friends, two cranes, planned to "live happily together ever after" inhabiting a pond overflowing with rich flora and fauna. But that was sadly not to be. In due time, a severe drought brought the pond to the verge of drying up leaving the three friends with no option other than of migrating to a different place. While, it would be easy for the feathery duo to happily fly away to "greener pastures", it would be improbable for their hopper friend to cover miles to reach the same "safer zone". Now as the inseparable friends put their minds together on reaching yet another pool of water safely together. The one of the webbed feet weaved together a brainy plan. The cranes would carry a stick in their beaks while the frog would latch onto the stick with his "big" mouth.

On the appointed day, the trio took off and all was going well till they flew past a nearby drought-hit village.

The people on seeing this strange sight wondered aloud as to who was the "Mastermind" behind this "Great Escape" plan.

Mindlessly the "high-flying" boastful hero opened his mouth to become not a hero but a big zero thereafter.
